

Joseph Sliwkowski

Dr. Sliwkowski is the President of GIVE Inc. and Advisory Board Member of the GIVE mHealth Pilot Program at Harvard. He has experience in many sectors of the U.S. health care system and is responsible for leadership for the expansion of medical technology start-up the United States. He works with partners and doctors to examine and determine key points in the medical field where mobile technology may enhance outcomes. And works closely with decision makers to understand their objectives for medical outcome opportunities through examination of healthcare and medical strategic partnerships.

The 20,000+ patients he has treated for musculoskeletal conditions has been through a medical home model coordinating care from leading surgical subspecialists, physical therapists and integrative medical providers. His clinical practices have been successful through a simple motto: "Physicians should be in the business of trying to put ourselves out of business." In other words, he has been focused on clinical outcomes and prevention. He is the former President of ZeroAge and served as Chief Medical Director at Subaru Motors. He has held other medical director positions at Occupational and Environmental Network, Unity Healthcare, LLC, Indiana University Arnett Health System, and Braintree Rehabilitation Hospital Network.
